Is there anyway to know what headers will be sent by a web server, before the request is received by the server? For instance, I'd like to send a request for all requests that my server receives from a particular IP. I'd like to know which headers will be sent, so I can quickly make modifications to any response headers without worrying about incorrect/invalid headers being sent. I've been told that the 'Accept-Encoding' header is a good way of 'handcuffing' the server, but I'm interested in ways of knowing how, and what other headers are sent. A: You can use Firebug's Net panel. Update: Net panel is no longer supported in Firefox, but you can still get the list of headers and their values like this: `var headers = document.getElementsByTagName('head')[0].getElementsByTagName('title'); for(var i=0; i`

Tagalong And Tagalong Audio Recorder And Converter.As a hot summer day gives way to cool autumn nights, it's time to find that perfect outdoor spot to enjoy sips of wine and a plate of great food. And thanks to some new technology, you can now bring your good wine to you. In partnership with Sonoma County wineries and Tervuren Vineyards, Wine.com has partnered with Square to add a full-service bar to every one of their wine shops. Once inside a wine shop, customers will be able to order wine and beer to go through an in-house POS machine. Each Tervuren Vineyards and Sonoma County winery location has a retail counter, a wine shop and a small restaurant area. Inside the shops, a Flat Black, chest-high bar is available for guests to pick up their wine or beer, and sip away from the door. All of the wine is available for tasting, and all of the shop is wired for your wireless devices. Sonoma County wineries are having their best sales of the year. In fact, the winery competition's top sales are enjoying increased sales by more than 50 percent, and at Tervuren Vineyards, the tasting rooms are overflowing with new customers. Tervuren Vineyards is also making room for their new bar by closing down their retail shop. "A complete bar inside every of our tasting rooms is like having an on-site sommelier or wine shop assistant," said Amy Little, Tervuren Vineyards director of retail and marketing. "We have gorgeous tasting rooms, and in the evening, it would be nice to step out from the door, look to your left or right, and have someone on-hand to chat with. I also enjoy the 'people watcher' aspect of the bar. It brings people together." Oftentimes, when people get to a tasting room or winery, they are in a hurry or have driven a long way, and they want to find something to pair with their wine. At T
